

SEE ANCIENT GREEK WARRIORS LIVE!!
The Greek Warriors, A Living History Group to Appear at OPA! Big, Fat Greek Festival

Members of the The Greek Warriors, a living history group based in the New York area who have appeared on the History Channel and at many promotional events across the tri-state area, will appear at the OPA! Big, Fat Greek Festival (hosted by the Greek Orthodox Parish of Hunterdon County) on June 20th and 21st at Razberry's on Route 12 in Flemington, NJ. The two day event opens at noon each day and promises food and fun for the entire family.

In addition to all of the great Greek food, desserts, vendors and children's activities already planned for the festival, their appearance will be fun and educational for the whole family (especially those fans of the recent movie, "300 Spartans"). Recreating the ancient Greek Hoplite Warrior, their costumes, arms and armor portray the classic Greek Warrior with historic flair. Spears, shields, and Corinthian helmets with tall horse hair crests, are all part of their living history demonstration. Hoplites will pose for pictures and interact with festival guests. They will also provide a military history presentation with a short explanation of Ancient Greek warfare, the soldiers of that time and the weapons used.

Just in time for a special Father's Day photo opportunity—bring Dad to see ancient Greek warriors live (and to enjoy some great Greek food, too)! For more information about the festival, please visit www.go-church.org or call 908-782-9741.
